

Nikko AM SGD Investment Grade Corporate Bond ETF

Singapore corporate bonds now made affordable for everyone

Singapore's first investment grade corporate bond ETF

Companies issue bonds as a form of borrowing to fund business activities, expansion or new ventures. These corporate bonds typically trade in large blocks of at least SGD 250,000, and are not usually accessible to individual investors.

The Nikko AM SGD Investment Grade Corporate Bond ETF (the "Fund") is the first to offer investors easy access to SGD-denominated, investment grade corporate bonds in affordable units.

The Fund aims to replicate the performance of the iBoxx SGD Non-Sovereigns Large Cap Investment Grade Index (the "Index").

In Singapore, the Nikko AM SGD Investment Grade Corporate Bond Index Fund is classified as an Excluded Investment Product. This means that a Customer Account Review is not required before an investor transacts in the Fund.

The Fund is included under the CPF Investment Scheme ("CPFIS") – Ordinary Account and is classified under the Low to Medium Risk – Narrowly Focused – Country – Singapore category.

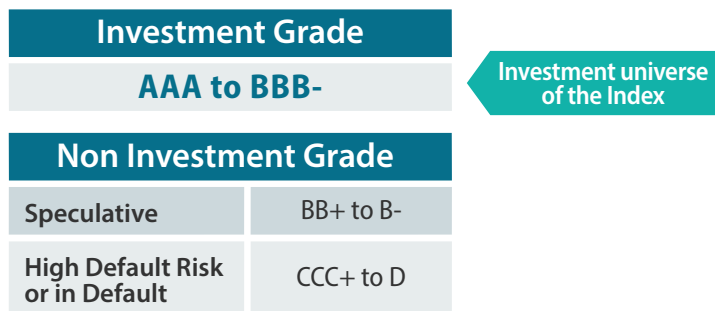

Investment grade bonds

The Index enjoys an A average credit rating* and invests in investment grade bonds. An investment grade rating shows that the corporate bond has a relatively lower risk of default, and are normally rated from AAA to BBB- (S&P).

Bonds with credit ratings lower than BBB- (S&P) are considered to have a lower credit quality. They are also commonly known as Junk Bonds, and subject investors to more uncertain coupon payments as well as higher default risk.

Investment grade issuers

The Index comprises bonds issued by established and credible institutions such as sovereign wealth fund Temasek Financial I Limited and statutory boards such as the Housing Development Board (HDB), the Land Transport Authority (LTA), and the Public Utilities Board (PUB).

Why invest in this ETF?

1. Higher yield backed by investment grade credit quality

With a yield of 4.2%, the Index offers higher yield as compared to Singapore Government Securities (SGS) 5-year yield at 3.1%^.

Nevertheless, it should be noted that this Index focuses on investment grade issuers, which seeks to minimise credit risk exposure.

Source: IHS Markit, MAS, and Bloomberg, as of 30 June 2023. Past performance is not indicative of future performance.

^Yield comparison is based on the yield to maturity of the 2.625% Singapore Government Bond maturing on 1 May 2028 (ISIN code SG31B7000002) as of 30 June 2023. The Index's yield to maturity is as of 30 June 2023, assuming no corporate default. This is calculated by weighting the yield of each bond held by the Index at the time of calculation with capitalization and duration. Yield of a bond is the interest rate used to bring all future cashflows of the bond to its present value. This number is for reference only and would vary according to market conditions and it does not represent the ETF's distribution yield or actual rate of return.

The chart below displays the difference in annual yield between the iBoxx SGD Non-Sovereigns Large Cap Investment Grade Index and Singapore Government bonds of similar maturities across time.

2. Stability and strength of the Singapore Dollar

- For local investors, the Nikko AM SGD Investment Grade Corporate Bond ETF being SGD-denominated poses no currency risk.

- For foreign investors, the stability and strength of the Singapore Dollar is positive.

The Singapore Dollar is managed against a basket of currencies of its major trading partners along a typically appreciating path or crawl within a policy band.

An appreciating trajectory for the Singapore Dollar Nominal Effective Exchange Rate (S$NEER) helps to contain inflationary pressures, and Singapore believes that a strong S$NEER is one of the several prime indicators of a highly-competitive economy.

3. Diversification value

During the period from Jun 2013 to Jun 2023, Singapore corporate bonds displayed low correlation to Singapore equities.
